"It gives me great pride to be a part of the APEC Women and the Economy Summit. Today, the world has changed dramatically and women have moved beyond the traditional roles of wives and mothers to also become leaders in every industry and arena," said Weili Dai, Co-founder of Marvell. "I believe the coming decade will be shaped by the emergence of women leaders in the global economy. By nature, women bring different and complementary attributes to the world of business and technology -- our own brand of passion, compassion and commitment to making the world a better place through commerce. It is my belief that women are the glue behind a strong company, family and community, and I hope through the Summit to encourage more women leaders to bring their natural talents to improving the world's economy."

"The Women and the Economy Summit gathers public and private sector leaders from the APEC region to share best practices and foster women's entrepreneurship," said Ambassador Melanne Verveer, U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for Global Women's Issues. "We must engage and encourage women as business leaders and innovators to grow the global economy."

For the Summit, Ms. Dai has assembled an all-star group of women from all walks of life to participate in a panel luncheon, "Technology and Women's Entrepreneurship in APEC Economies," which will discuss the role of education, technology, public- private research, and government policy has played in building the foundation for innovation in the United States. For this panel, Ms. Dai will be joined by several influential woman leaders and entrepreneurs from a variety of industries as follows: Deborah Forte, President of Scholastic Entertainment Inc.; Kathy Hill, Senior Vice President of Cisco; Congresswoman Zoe Lofgren; Professor Claire Tomlin, Ph.D., U.C. Berkeley College of Engineering; and Dr. Telle Whitney, President and CEO of the Anita Borg Institute for Women and Technology. Madame Meng Xiaosi, Vice President of the All-China Women's Federation, and Ginger Lew, Senior Counselor, White House National Economic Council and Small Business Administration Administrator, will also provide a special welcome address to reflect on the China and U.S. governments' progress in fostering women entrepreneurs. Together these women will discuss their specific areas of expertise and share insights about how their personal success can be replicated and elevated to strengthen Asian-Pacific economies.

Ms. Dai's panel, "Technology and Women's Entrepreneurship in APEC Economies," will be held on Friday, Sept. 16 at 12:30 - 2 p.m. PDT at the Westin St. Francis Hotel, in the California East and West Rooms, 335 Powell Street, San Francisco, California, 94102. For more information on the Summit, visit the website: <http://www.bayareacouncil.org/WES.php>.

APEC WES is the premier event bringing together senior private and public sector players for a dialogue on fostering women's economic empowerment among the APEC economies. Discussions from this Summit will provide a set of policy recommendations to be delivered to the APEC Economic Leaders' Meeting, scheduled for November 12-13, 2011 in Honolulu, Hawaii.
