"I am very humbled and honored by the opportunity to deliver the commencement address at my own school, U.C. Berkeley," said Weili Dai, Co-Founder of Marvell. "It is very important to me to recognize the great accomplishments of the graduates, as well as the support and contributions of the professors and parents. I truly believe that passion, determination, good principles and a great education are the key foundation for success. I hope sharing my story with this year's graduating class will encourage a new generation of innovators and entrepreneurs to follow their passion, create their own paths, and believe in themselves that they can change the world – Go Bears!"

"Weili Dai is a testament to what UC Berkeley graduates can accomplish," said S. Shankar Sastry, dean of the University of California, Berkeley College of Engineering. "She is a trailblazer and a global technology leader. She also shares with us a deep commitment to serving society and making a difference. I'm proud that our graduates will be inspired by one of their own and motivated to dream big."
